This is the first thing you see when you open the app for the first time. It is a super simple screen where you just type in how many ounces of water you want to drink every day. The app takes that number and saves it as your main goal for the day so it can start tracking your

This is your home screen where you can see a progress bar that shows how much you have had to drink so far. On this slide, you also see a little pop up alert. The app has a timer running in the background that automatically sends you a reminder to hydrate and take a second to yourself since we are usually all busy and moving around.

☐ 16 oz.

When you click that alert or hit the log button, this screen pops up with a few quick options like 8 ounces or 12 ounces. Once you pick one, the app uses a bit of logic to add that to your daily total. It also saves each entry into a list so you can look back at your history later in the week.

Inhale Slowly...

Right after you log your water, the app automatically switches to this calming screen with a one minute timer. This is the part that helps with mental health awareness because it forces you to stop what you are doing and just focus on your breathing for sixty seconds. You cannot skip it because the whole point is to make sure you are taking time for yourself.

Weekly Summary

Monday	120 oz
Tuesday	111 oz
Wednesday	110 oz
Thursday	125 oz
Friday	124 oz
Saturday	90 oz
Sunday	125 oz

This last screen shows you a summary of how you did over the past seven days. It pulls all those water entries from the list it saved and shows them as a chart so you can see if you actually hit your goals. It is a good way to see if you are staying consistent with your hydration and your breathing breaks.
